

McLean Crash Kills CIA Man In Sports Car

A CIA employe died early today near McLean when his sports car skidded off a curve on Kirby road, throwing him into the water of Pimmit Run.

Fairfax County police identified him as James Edward White, jr., 23, of 409 Ridge road S.E., Washington. His car skidded from the roadway one-half mile south of its intersection with Route 123.

The car hit a bridge railing, flew through the air and landed upside down in the creek, according to the report.

Mr. White's body was found lying face down in the creek by a motorist who had been following him, James Scott of 813 Farragut street N.W., Washington, police said.

Mr. White was pronounced dead at Arlington Hospital.
